FOUR DAYS ON THE DESERT.

Donnelly Barely Escapes From the Waterless Waste.

San Francisco, Nov. 26.—A dispatch from Randsburg, Cal., says that Felix Donnelly, who had wandered for four days and nights on the Mojave Desert and narrowly escaped death, reached there last night. Donnelly drove a horse to the Argus Mountains, seventy miles away across the desert. It was on his return trip that he missed the way.

After driving all day and night he reached Sanders' well, only to find it dried up. His horse fell in the harness and, unhitching the animal, he spread some hay for it to eat, and himself set out on foot for El Paso Tunnel, where he knew there was water. He thought he knew the location of El Paso Mountain, but became confused and wandered in a big circle for three days and nights, when he dropped and lost consciousness.

He was found with his head under a bush near the Keeler stage road. The days were terribly hot on the desert and only the cool nights saved his life.

Plunker, Chuggs & Co.

The Merrymakers presented the above comedy last night to a rather slim house, due to the downpour, doubtless. There was some very good buffoonery and two or three patches of clever acting. There was some dirt, lugged in, as usual, because it was dirt and not in the least funny, though the crowd laughed to prevent the awkward silence that follows a joke fallen flat. The crowd is always obliging in such particulars. Tonight the company will put on what they say is the best play they have given here. Ladies' free tickets with each paid thirty-cent ticket as heretofore.

ALDERMEN MET LAST NIGHT.

And Transacted Special and Routine Business.

The following Aldermen responded to their names last night: Elam, Frazier, McKinney, Phipps, Sergeant, Shaw and Thornton.

The finance committee made a report recommending an appropriation of $250 to be equally divided between the Eagle Hose Company and the Southside Hose Company for the purpose of assisting in erecting houses for their hose wagons and apparatus. The report was adopted and the appropriation made.

Rev. P. L. Groome appeared before the board and asked that the sewer on South Elm street be extended to Lewis street. The matter was referred to the sewer committee.

J. R. Mendenhall stated to the board that during the recent fire at South Elm and Lewis streets M. C. Kenley received injuries by burning in rescuing some people from a building and has not been able to work for some time. He asked that the matter be referred to the fireman's committee to see if the city could not aid him; the matter was referred.

D. W. Carl asked that the curbing be extended on Mebane street, and the matter was referred to the street committee.

The special committee appointed to confer with Sheriff Hoskins regarding the ill conduct of prisoners in jail made a verbal report stating that they had seen the Sheriff and he had promised to use every lawful means to remedy the evil.

The Sheriff also requested that the committee heretofore appointed to confer with the board of County Commissioners with regard to the erection of a new jail appear before the commissioners with him at the next meeting and press upon them the importance of a new structure. The committee was requested to appear.

The special committee on a sanitary ordinance made its report, and on motion of Mr. Sergeant it was postponed to next meeting of the board because of the small attendance.

The Jr. O. U. A. M. asked to be allowed to place a flag upon the school buildings and present a bible to each. The request was referred to the proper committee.

A. N. Perkins was given permission to sell fresh meat at Landreth's old stand.

On motion of Alderman Shaw the board adjourned until next Tuesday night.

CAUGHT IN THE BREAK.

Greensboro Men Preferred Creditors in a Virginia Assignment.

A prominent lumber dealer of Charlottesville, Va., J. H. Nalls, made an assignment on the 22nd which caught North Carolina men to the tune of about four thousand dollars, two of our Greensboro firms being in the smash.

R. W. Brooks is one of them and he is a creditor to the amount of about eight hundred dollars. The Guilford Lumber Company is in it for about the same amount. Capt. Billy Williams is also tied up to the tune of some five or six hundred, while Messrs. Britton & Johnson, of Spout Springs, hold papers for twenty-seven hundred.

Messrs. Brooks, Britton, and Mr. W. D. Mendenhall, of Guilford Lumber Company, have gone to Charlottesville to look after their claims. A letter to these gentlemen from Mr. Nalls tells them that their claims are among the first preferred creditors and we hope they will get their money.

Second Entertainment.

The second of the course of entertainments at the Normal and Industrial College, will be given next Friday night by the Frances Hughes Concert company. This company is recommended as one of the very best and something rich and entertaining may be expected. Further announcements will be made. Remember the date Friday night, December 3rd.

The Kronberg Concert Company were here at noon today and went to Durham, where they sing tonight. Mr. Kronberg tells us they are singing to crowded houses everywhere they go. Mrs. Kronberg has entirely recovered from her throat trouble.

THREE BURNED TO DEATH

In A Fire in New York City This Morning.

DR. PARKHURST IS DISGUSTED

With New York and the Sentiment May Be Mutual.--London Will Dress Hair in a New Fashion.

By Wire to THE TELEGRAM

Jamestown, N. Y. Nov. 27—At four o'clock this morning a fire in the Atlantic block on first street, this city, resulted in the death of Walter Sessions, of Pauoma, Sadie Voss, of Buffalo and August W. Jordan, address unknown, though he is believed to have been connected with the New York Central Railway. The building was a disorderly house. The two men were visitors and the woman an inmate. The fire was confined to two rooms.

PARKHURST COME BACK.

By Wire to THE TELEGRAM.

New York, Nov. 27—Dr. Parkhurst and wife arrived this morning on the White Star Line Steamship Adriatic. He appeared to be in good health but wore a look of disgust which was attributed to the result of the late campaign. He said he was heart broken to come back and find the city at the mercy of the same gang from whose clutches it was wrested once before.

THE CHIGNON COMING AGAIN.

By Cable to THE TELEGRAM.

London, Nov.27—There is a marked change prevailing in the style of dressing the hair indicating an inclination to return to the Chinon which was in vogue twenty years ago and dates back to the savage ages.

"ACCOMMODATION."

How it Was Years Ago and How it is Now.

You've all heard of "accommodation" trains. It is related of the Egypt Coal Fields road from Fayetteville to Egypt (now Cumnock), since extended from the mountains to the sea which is now the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley, that years ago when Capt. Dave Jones was engineer, conductor, mail agent, baggage master and all that, he used to stop his train and allow the passengers to get off and pick blackberries.

It is also related that the same train used to pick up eggs, butter and such things, at the farm houses along the route and carry them to Fayetteville, and that on one occasion when Capt. Dave stopped his train and walked a quarter of a mile for some eggs, the good old lady told him she only had twenty-three, but there was a hen on and if he would wait awhile he could get two dozen. And the story goes that the accommodating captain quietly took a seat on a stump in the yard and waited.

He did not wait long before the lively cackling of the old speckled hen announced the fact that the required egg to complete the two dozen awaited him. Placing them in his little basket he went back through the fields to his train, tooted the whistle, pulled the bell rope and rolled away without a murmur from the passengers who had patiently waited.

This may or may not be true, but the writer once heard it told in the presence of the genial captain and he didn't deny it, so we take it that there is some truth in it.

While making a trip this week over the new road, the Durham and Charlotte, we saw an act of accommodation that is worthy of praise. The road is now operated about fifteen miles, from Gulf up into Moore county, and after leaving Gulf there are no connections to make, and there is plenty of time. A few miles out from Gulf an old field was on fire, and a fence running through it nearby the railroad track was burning up. When near the spot Engineer Wilcox stopped the train and with the crew put out the fire with pine bushes and water from the tender.

It did not inconvenience any one and no one aboard grumbled at the delay, but rather approved the work of the train people in putting out the fire, which if allowed to burn a little longer would have been beyond control and would have wrought much damage to fences and other property.

The second entertainment of the State Normal and Industrial College will come off at the College next Friday night, December 3. See announcement elsewhere.

Facts Worth Studying.

If the Southern Stock-Mutual pays no larger dividends than the 20 per cent. now paid, and the business increases during the next seven years in the same ratio it has increased during the last three years, the actual saving for the ten years to policy-holders in North and South Carolina will be $194,822.00, and to the policy-holders in Greensboro alone, $26,237.00. Besides this the Company's assets (reinsurance reserve and surplus) represented by still larger figures will be kept at home and invested in the state. What better investment can the public make than by upholding an institution like this?

A PUBLIC LIBRARY.

A movement is on foot to secure for Greensboro a public library. That bare announcement ought to be enough. It should enlist the unfaltering support of every citizen who is able to understand what a book is and why books are written.

Without putting on airs or being pharisaical about the matter Greensboro is pretty well provided for in an educational way. As large a percentage of its people, especially of its women, are college bred as of any town in the State of like dimensions. This is due to the presence of two female colleges that are unsurpassed by any in the State and by few, if any, in the South.

She also has excellent city schools. But there is one thing she has not, yet needs sorely: a public library. She needs, must have it and sooner or later of course will have it.

In this day and time people who know are coming to admit that books are as much a necessity as houses and railroads and postoffices and bacon and cabbages. They really last quite as long and have as much in them and require as much brain in the making.

There is just as great need in every community for a public library as there is for a jail and a hotel and a postoffice. We make the assertion boldly that a close observer can tell by twenty-four hours' residence in a town whether it has a good public library, without the subject being mentioned.

A public library gives to the community a tone that is pervasive and unmistakable. It contributes distinctly to the strengthening of what is best and the weakening of what is worst. It becomes the centre of an intellectual life that is cumulative. It is an evidence, to the outside world, of intelligence that no self-respecting town can afford to omit for long when it is able to supply it. And Greensboro is able.

It will require a struggle, doubtless, to secure a public library. It must be secured for all that. Somebody must take the matter in hand and give it time and patience, thought and labor. And somebody must give money. And there is where hope will be deferred. Yet the money will be given if the matter is rightly presented, if it is thoroughly understood that the library is to be one that those who do not read will be proud to look at.

Action will be taken in the matter at an early day. It can not be taken too early. Yet when the matter is begun let the beginning be made with the distinct understanding that it shall go forward; that there is to be no fiasco. Now let some doer take the matter in hand.

Grover Cleveland has written a letter saying that his young hopeful will be a member of the Princeton class of 1915. Which shows that Mr. Cleveland has the same attributes as many other fond parents. Mrs. McKinley should knit a bandage for his head.

The initiated will not be in the least surprised to hear that a man died in Yonkers from trimming a corn.

SATURDAY'S LITERARY CHAT.

[All books and magazines mentioned below may be had at Wharton's book store.]

The College Message for November is at hand. It opens with a note by Prof. Peacock of a "Rare Volume," the title of which is a "Southern Tour," by Mrs. Annie Royall. This book is, Prof. Peacock tells us, the only volume of the kind known at present. Prof. Raper's history of "Church and Private Schools" continues, there being a sixteen page installment. An excellent sketch is given of Dr. David Caldwell's Log College, its influence upon the education of the State and an estimate of Dr. Caldwell himself. It was said of this school that it exercised a wider and more permanent influence on the South than any contemporary institution. The "Queen's Museum," of Charlotte is also taken up and discussed carefully in its relations to the education of the period. It is worth while saying that if the rest of the history is marked by the same thorough minuteness and reliability it will be an invaluable contribution to the history of the State. Other papers in this number are an entertaining "History of West Market St. Church" by Ruth York, and "Dillon's Mill's," by J. M. Bandy. From the editorial department this one sentence is taken with distinct approval: "It seems worse than a waste of white paper and printers' ink to force crude tales of love and romantic nonsense from students who have little or no ability of a story-telling kind."

***

Perhaps the two most notable contributions to the periodical literature of the month are Lew Wallace's poem, "The Wooing of Malkatoon," which appears in Harper's, and Kipling's "The Feet of the Young Men," which appears in Scribner's for December. Both these magazines are excellent Scribner's especially. It is perhaps the most artistic number of any magazine that has appeared during the year.

***

But of the poems. We hear much of the decadence of the poetic sentiment and of poetry. There is doubtless somewhat in it. But it is a bit strange that if there is no longer a demand for poetry that such old hands at the bellows as Harpers should begin the Christmas number with a lengthy poem. Either there is still a large section of the magazine reading public that enjoys poetry or the Harper Brothers do not known how to run a magazine. Lew Wallace does not do literary work purely for glory, and the Wooing of Malkatoon must have cost the publishers a pretty penny. And it was worth it.

***

But is it poetry? That is a question which many, like the writer, will ask themselves as they read. In general it may be said when poetry is read appreciatingly and yet a doubt remains as to whether it is poetry, the doubt is right. Mr. Wallace has at least written excellent verse. It may be that it is the "story" of the poem that attracts, narrative poems are a bit treacherous and many who read Tennyson's Idyls with interest, fancying their poetic souls are being thrilled, are merely reading to "see how it will end."

***

There is in it something of the languorous fire, the passion and the mystery of the Orient, the fire and the passion and the mystery that is found only "off in the sunrise somewhere." It flows smoothly as does Tennyson's verse in the Princess, and here and there words and sense are blended indissolubly in a line suggesting Tennyson, but ever it falls off from the heights of the bard of the Idyls, lacking that finer essence found in his work and in the works of none more freely.

***

And yet who does not read the Wooing of Malkatoon will miss the literary production of the month.

***

Kipling's "The Feet of the Young Men" is inferior to his great "Recessional," but it is for all that quite a fine poem. As different from Wallace's as a nugget is from a coin. You feel as though Kipling had written it at a sitting. And what is the charm? Kipling is pre-eminetly the poet of the untrammeled soul—not of the soul in the sense of sentimentalist, of the theologian, of the novelist, but he is "for each a man that knows his naked soul." The petty, flimsy, pretenses, the artificial trappings and appendages that civilization tacks on drop away at his touch. The human is all or nothing with him.

***

This poem voices the longing for free air and wild life that has not yet died out in the race, that comes to almost every man who is worth the while, who is not more of his mother than of his father and in many die hard crying "Quick, ah, heave the camp kit over! For the Red Gods make their medicine again."

The English and the French.

It has been the writer's fate to live a good deal on both sides of the English channel, and nothing is more amusing than to hear the absurdities that are gravely asserted by each of their neighbors. To an Englishman a Frenchman will always be "a tiger or monkey" of Carlyle, while to the French mind English gravity is only hypocrisy to cover every vice. Nothing pleases him so much as a great scandal in England, and he will gleefully bring you the paper containing the account to prove how true is his opinion. It is quite useless to explain (as the writer has often tried) to the British mind that Frenchmen do not all pass their lives drinking absinth on the boulevards, and as Englishmen (as Max O'Rell says) seem to leave their morals in a valise at Dover when off for a short visit to Paris, to be picked up on their return, it would be time lost trying to make a Gaul understand what good husbands and fathers they are.

These two great nations always seem to stand in the relation to each other that Rome and Greece held. Our English cousins are the great conquerors of the world, the great colonizers, with a vast capital in which wealth and misery jostle each other in the streets; a hideous conglomeration of buildings and monuments, without form and void, very much as old Rome must have been under the Cæsars, enormous buildings without taste, and enormous wealth, while the French seem to have inherited the temperament of the Greeks. The drama, painting and sculpture are the preoccupation of the people. The yearly exhibitions are almost the unique subject of conversation in drawing room or club. The state protects the artist and buys his work. Their "conservatories" form the singers and their schools the painters and architects of Europe and America.—Idler in New York Post.

Greco-Turkish Strategy and Football.

The strategic position of the Greek and Turkish armies in the late campaign was but little more complicated than the strategic position of two football teams when they are lined up for a scrimmage. When the game began, the Greeks had possession of the ball, and they rushed it into Turkish territory, where they lost it almost immediately on a fumble, and after that the Turks drove them rapidly down the field, going around their ends and breaking through their center very much as they pleased.

The Greeks were outnumbered three to one, but there are many people who think that they would have run away even had the number of men on both sides been equal. There is, however, no way of proving that they would have done this, while it can be proved that they were outnumbered and were nearly always for that reason attacked as strongly on the flank as in the front. This fact should be placed to their credit side in summing up their strange conduct. If an eleven from Princeton played three elevens from Yale at the same time, one can see that the game would hardly be interesting, and to carry out the simile still further and then to drop it, it was as though this Princeton eleven was untrained and had no knowledge of tricks or of team play, and absolutely no regard for its captain as a captain.—Richard Harding Davis in Harper's Magazine.

Ingenuity In the Cabin.

During one of his journeys a famous traveler came to a lonely cabin and found the door wide open. In the center of the room he entered he found a cradle, in which an infant was reclining fast asleep. The cradle was rocking with surprising regularity, but no sign of what propelled it could be seen.

The traveler's curiosity was aroused. He went to the cradle and found a stout cord attached to a nail driven in the side of it. The cord, he found, passed through an auger hole in the side of the house.

He took up the trail, which soon led him into a ravine, where a donkey was standing and switching his tail. The mystery was explained. The other end of the cord was attached to the ass' tail, and the constant switching of its caudal appendage furnished motive power sufficient to rock the cradle.—London Telegraph.

A Little Testimonial.

"How do you like your new typewriter?" inquired the agent.

"It's grand," was the immediate and enthusiastic response. "I wonder how I ever got along without it."

"Well, would you mind giving me a little testimonial to that effect?"

"Certainly not. Do it gladly."

So he rolled up his sleeves and in an incredibly short time pounded out this:

Afted Using the automatig Back-action a type writ, er for thre emonthan d Over. I unhesstattingly pronounce it prono nce it to be al even more than th e Manufacturs claim? for it. During the time been in our possession e. i. th ree monthzi id has more than paid for itself in the saving of time and labrr? JOHN £ GIBBS.

"There you are, sir."

"Thanks," said the agent and moved quickly away.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Local Flavor.

An American who had left his native country to travel in Europe with the maxim, "When in Rome do as the Romans do," well in mind, found himself in Marseilles. He wanted some ice cream and went into a restaurant and ordered it.

"What flavor will you have?" asked the waiter.

The American hesitated a moment and then remembered his maxim.

"Oh, garlic, I suppose," he answered.—Youth's Companion.

Rapid Change.

"My hair turned from raven black to snowy white in a single night."

"That's nothing. I went into a pawnbroker's shop once and stayed only 15 minutes. When I came out, my watch had turned from gold to silver."—London Tit-Bits.

Are You Subject to Attacks of COLIC?

If So, There is No Need to Suffer.

Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy

WILL CURE YOU

For several years I had been subject to severe attacks of cramp colic. Sometimes they would last me an hour and hardly a week passed that I did not have several attacks. I tried everything that was suggested, but found no relief. During these attacks the muscles of the arm and leg were terribly drawn and the whole body was cramped. I was advised to try Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy, which gave me relief at once, but not until I had taken two dozen bottles was I entirely cured. It was eight years ago since I took the remedy, and I have not had a touch of the trouble since.

Land Sale

By virtue of a mortgage deed executed by John Bethel and wife Fannie Bethel, on the 28th day of October, 1896, to J. W. Kerr, (since dead) and in consequence of a failure to pay the debt secured in said mortgage, I will sell to the highest bidder, for cash, at the court house door in Greensboro, N. C., on Saturday, December 4th, 1897, the lands described in said mortgage, butted and bounded as follows:

Beginning on northeast corner of street on Main street leading to Greensboro, thence north 60 degrees east along westerly side of said street 10 1-3 poles, thence north 87 degrees west 14 1-2 poles, thence south 30 degrees west 10 1-6 poles to north side of said street, thence 87 degrees east with said street 14 poles to the beginning, containing one acre, more or less. There is reserved from this sale the lot out of this boundary heretofore sold to Frank Fields.

The above mortgage is recorded in book 102, page 707, in the office of the register of deeds, Nov. 4, 1897.

LAURA KERR, Executrix of J. W, Kerr, deceased.

A Great Natural Curiosity.

A perfect face of a delicate Jewish cast was discovered in a small stone about as large around as a 10 cent piece found lying on the railroad grade near Junction City, Ore. Not only are the brow, hair, beard and beautiful aquiline nose perfectly shaped and distinct on the stone, but the neck and shoulders are vignetted off into the delicate agate like tracery of the background as it would have been done by an artist.

Not only is the face as delicately beautiful in line as one stamped upon a Greek coin of the reign of Alexander, but in this stone are reproduced the colors of life. The face is white, with a blending of flesh tones, growing deeper in the shadows of the neck and shoulders. The hair in the dark shadow at the back is a rich auburn, just the color associated most often with the ascetic Jewish type to which the whole face belongs. It is perhaps the strangest part of this extraordinary coincidence of forms that each feature, from the cavernous eye and delicate hollowed cheek to the high, narrow brow and wavy auburn hair, is in accord with a familiar type of the Christ. In this respect the Oregon stone is infinitely superior as a work of nature's art to the "Stone Man of Sorrows," about which a book was published in London. This head, in a stone a little larger than the recent discovery, was picked up at Oberammergau as a mere casual memento of the spot, because of its associations with the passion play, and eight years afterward, being held in a certain position, was seen to reveal the face that was somewhat sentimentally supposed to resemble the face of Christ.—Boston Transcript.

If Water Never Froze.

The whole economy of nature would undergo a startling change if water never froze. The world's climates would be revolutionized. The icebound polar seas would cease to exercise their chilling influences, and consequently the currents of the ocean might either cease or be turned aside in different directions.

Thus the gulf stream would seek other shores than those of Britain, and the climate there might be subject to the extremes of heat and cold noticeable in other countries of the same latitude. The icebound rivers of the north, notably those of Russia and Siberia, would be open for navigation, and Russia's activity as a sea power and a commercial nation might alter the whole world of commerce.

Canada would become another country altogether. An immense tract of land would be available for cultivating hardy plants, and Greenland might be what its name indicates. The absence of icebergs off the coasts of Newfoundland and Iceland would result in a much warmer climate in those islands, where now the crops often fail.

Ice, too, plays an important part in the economy of nature. Thus, if water never froze, snow, hail and hoar frost would cease. The loosening of soils and the disintegration of rocks by the frost and many other now vital effects would be lost. In short, the absence of ice would be on the one hand an incalculable disaster, on the other hand a great boon.—London Globe.

A Great Authority on Evolution.

There is a sketch of "A Great Naturalist," the late Edward Drinker Cope, in The Century. It is written by Henry Fairfield Osborn. Professor Osborn says: His pioneer exploration came early in the age of Darwinism, when missing links not only in the human ancestry, but in the greater chain of backboned animals, were at the highest premium. Thus he was fortunate in recording the discovery in northwestern New Mexico of by far the oldest quadrupeds known, in finding among these the most venerable monkey, in describing to the world hundreds of links—in fact, whole chains—of descent between the most ancient quadrupeds and what we please to call the higher types, especially the horses, camels, tapirs, dogs and cats. He labored successfully to connect the reptiles with the amphibians, and the latter with the fishes, and was as quick as a flash to detect in the paper of another author the oversight of some long sought link which he had been awaiting. Thus in losing him we have lost our ablest and most discerning critic. No one has made such profuse and overwhelming demonstration of the actual historical working of the laws of evolution, his popular reputation perhaps resting most widely upon his practical and speculative studies in evolution.

A Day's Journey.

"A day's journey," as the expression is used in the Scripture, means from 10 to 20 miles. The "Sabbath day's journey," frequently mentioned in the Bible, was 2,000 paces, or about three-quarters of a mile. The Jews were forbidden to travel farther than this distance on their Sabbath, but often evaded the prohibition by taking a small quantity of food and burying it in the ground at the required distance from their homes, whereby this spot became technically a habitation, and they could proceed from it another Sabbath day's journey on their way.

Hard Up.

Dad—You are a regular rolling stone, my son. Did you know that a rolling stone never gathers any moss?

Son—Yes, but the rolling stone would like to raise a little dust just now, dad, for a change.—Boston Courier.

Wifely Devotions.

"Poor old Munnyrich! With one leg in the grave."

"Yes, but his young wife is pulling valiantly at the other one."—Indianapolis Journal.

On June 12, 1755, upward of 2,400 salmon were taken above the bridge in the river Tyne and sold in Newcastle at 1d. and 1¼d. per pound.

Most of the canal barges in the south of England are worked by women.

Particularly Patient.

"Patience, my dear, patience," said Harkins blandly to his wife one morning at the breakfast table when she spoke a trifle sharply to one of the children for dropping his bread, buttered side down, on the cloth. "You know that accidents will happen, and we were children ourselves once. I'm sure that Bertie didn't mean to—great Jupiter! There goes Harold's glass of milk all over my new trousers. If I don't—oh, you'd better skedaddle from the table, young man. It beats everything. Get a cloth, somebody, and clean up this mess. It beats thunder that a man can't sit at his own table without being tormented and bespattered as I am every time I try to eat a meal under my roof. Look at these trousers—absolutely and utterly ruined. Just wait till I get hold of that boy. Just wait till I lay hands on him, and I'll teach him how to deliberately throw a glass of milk over a guinea pair of trousers. Don't tell me that he didn't mean to do it. He came to the table with the intention of doing it, and I—I—well, you'll see what I'll do when I get hold of him."—Strand Magazine.

An Enemy of Humanity.

There are probably few persons of mature years who have not read the story of the man who put the sick beggar upon his best horse in order to take him to his home and friends. The beggar suddenly recovered his strength and rode off with the horse that was the pride of the desert and the fortune of his owner. The man called after the thief and begged him to halt for a moment. Safe from pursuit, he did so, when his benefactor implored him never to tell how he obtained the horse, as the incident, if known, might stand in the way of relief of some honest beggar who sought charity by the wayside. Although it is claimed that the story is a very old one, it is just as applicable to our time as it was when the affair occurred.

It is the professional beggar who makes the most terrible suffering possible to those who are too proud, too honest or too timid to ask for what they need.—New York Ledger.

A Cemetery Story From Maine.

In a quaint old cemetery at Bass Harbor, Me., lies an aged couple who were noted in their life for their piety and their active interest in meetings and other good works. The old gentleman in his exhortation would often speak of wearing the crown, while the old lady often spoke of blossoming as the rose. After the tombstones had been erected at their graves with their names and ages duly chronicled thereon there appeared on his tombstone distinctly outlined the figure of a crown, while on hers appeared the figure of a full blown rose. The fact is well authenticated by many people who have visited the cemetery on purpose to see this wonderful sight.—Deer Isle Gazette.

When Bedlam Was Heaven.

A highlander had visited the capital of Scotland, and on his return to his "native hills" astonished his companions by telling them what he had seen and done there. "Dugald Macpherson an me," he said, "gaed doon to Luckie McNab's, in the Canongate, to meet some o' oor auld freens there. When we gaed in, there was anither ten or a dizzen beelenmen there, an they a' had their pipes wi' them. After we had maen a crack for awhile somebody proposed a tune. Wi' that we a' shouldered our pipes an began to play different tunes. Mon, it was bonnie. I just thocht I was in heeven!"—London Telegraph.

Mother, Sometimes.

"The child," said the shoe clerk boarder, "is father to the man."

"Oh, not always," said the cheerful idiot. "Sometimes it is a girl."—Indianapolis Journal.

The True Remedy.

W. M. Repine, editor Tiskilwa, Ill., "Chief," says: "We won't keep house without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, coughs and colds. Experimented with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home as in it we have a certain and sure cure for coughs, colds, whooping cough, etc." It is idle to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you as just as good as Dr. King's New Discovery. They are not as good, because this remedy has a record of cures and besides is guaranteed. It never fails to satisfy. Trial bottles free at C. E. Holton's drug store.

FIRE SWEEPS STOCK RANGES.

Thousands of Sheep in Danger Near Clayton, New Mexico.

Clayton, N. M., Nov. 26.—A prairie fire is sweeping over the country south of this point. The grass is very high and there has been no rain for weeks. The course of the fire is through the great cattle range belt, and for over 200 miles there is no barrier in its path. The wind is blowing very hard from the north. Thousands of sheep are in danger and are being rushed to places of safety.

Should the wind change to the south, which is now indicated by clearing skies, the danger will not be so great, otherwise there is no estimating the probable destruction. So far only two ranches have been destroyed.

OFF FOR THE KLONDIKE.

Four Women, a Girl and Eight Men Sail on the Harriet G.

New York, Nov. 26—The little brigantine Harriet G. left the Anglo-American dock, South Brooklyn, yesterday morning for San Francisco and St. Michael. She passed quarantine in tow of the tug J. G. Stevens at 11:40 A. M., and after reaching the open, cast off the hawser and headed to the southward.

Her ship's company of gold-seekers, all desirous of reaching the Klondike, consists of four women, a girl and eight men. They expect to round the Horn and get to the Golden Gate in about four months. The clippers of the 'fifties covered the distance in from 80 to 100 days.

Turkey Orders 150 Cannon.

Constantinople, Nov. 26—In spite of the protest of the Russian government which recently intimated to the Porte that if any considerable part of the idenmity paid by Greece should be devoted to the extension of the Ottoman armament the Russian government would insist upon a payment of the arrears of the Russo-Turkish indemnity, long overdue, Turkey has placed with Krupp, the great German gunmaker, an order for 150 large cannon at a total value of 1,500,000 marks.

THAT GAME ONCE MORE

And the Doughty News' Account of the Same.

Editor of Telegram:—

It would perhaps be as well to let the account of the Greensboro-Charlotte game in the News pass unnoticed as Charlotte has one paper with the decency and fairness to print both sides; but for the fact that silence in such cases is often misunderstood it would pass unnoticed. The scurrilous and cowardly insinuations of the News are too patently such to need exploitation. Gentlemen and sensible men will award the libel the contempt it merits without being given the cue.

The Greensboro team is composed of gentlemen. The Charlotte team gave its word before either team went to the grounds that Spence would not be played; yet he was brought on the gridiron disguised and an attempt was made to play him. Thereafter the protest of Greensboro was not against Spence, but against playing with an aggregation that adopted such tactics. It was a protest not against Spence, but against the dirty tactics which have tended to bring football into disrepute. Yet the Charlotte player who gave his word that Spence would not be played was heard talking about the "baby act" after the trouble arose over his deliberate disregard of the pledge given.

It is well known that in the game with Clemson College the Charlotte team did not even know one another and one of her players slugged another thinking him a Clemson man. The man slugged has since refused to play with the Charlotte team.

Greensboro did "succeed in keeping Charlotte from scoring;" she could probably done so with Spence at centre; but she evidently could not keep ignorant or vicious wind-jammers from deliberate falsification and misrepresentation through a paper that will prostitute its columns to such an end.

Hereafter Greensboro will meet upon the gridiron gentlemen only. It will then make small difference as to who looks on from the side lines.

▲ SPECTATOR.

A New Assignment Law.

The question of credit is by far the most important that confronts the business world today. It is almost impossible to do business without crediting and yet half of the failures are due to that cause. To avert or minimize credit losses almost assures success.

The Assignment Law of North Carolina is unsatisfactory to both debtor and creditor. By the present method of settlement the creditor at best gets little and, in a great many cases, nothing at all and the debtor is for ever and hopelessly left in debt. The The main trouble is that the assignor's assets are either sold at sacrifice prices or eaten up by expenses in winding up the business. Now if the assignor's property could be sold for its worth at a small cost in most instances the creditors would be paid and the assignor relieved of debt. To do that the assignor must have a market for his property and the best way to assure one is to make the creditors individually and collectively interested in the sale of the assets. Now if the law could be changed so as to, First: prohibit all preferred creditors in all assignments. Second: Have all the assets sold at public auction. Third: Permit any credit or apply the amount of his purchase to the liquidation of his debt.

All creditors would then be on an equal footing and they would see that every piece of property sold for its worth. The debtor would be benefited by the cancellation of his debts and the creditors would be interested in securing and dividing whatever the assign or possessed.

A summary as follows to wit: First. All creditors would be on an equal footing. Second. A speedy settlement would be assured. Third. The cost of settling and winding up the business would be reduced to a minimum. Fourth. A market for the debtors effects would be assured, and the market value guaranteed by the individual and collective interest of the creditors. Fifth. The creditors would certainly get something and most instances 100 cents on the dollar.
